AN ECCENTRIC BOOKSELLER.

By C. EDGAR THOMAS
(Secretary, Sion College and Library).

THE year 1766 saw a new ministry under the Earl of Chatham, it saw the development of discovery in the southern voyage of Willis and Carteret, the repeal of the Stamp Act, and Lorraine annexed to France. Incidentally it saw the birth of one destined to rank as a curious eccentric; and important as the other events are it is on that score alone that the year 1766 now claims our attention.

The eccentric in question was the ill-fated William Nelson Gardiner, child of fortune, Jack of most trades, impecunious artist, itinerant stroller, unsuccessful bookseller, eccentric, last of all—suicide. Judged by the standard of the world Gardiner was a failure, and not even a splendid failure. And yet?—as a general rule it is the failures of life that are the more interesting, seldom the successes.

Gardiner was born at Henry Street, Dublin, on June 11th, 1766, the son of John and Margaret Gardiner. His parents were of the lower class of society, the father at one time being 'crier and factotum' to Judge Scott, and the mother a pastry-cook. The son has described his mother as being the best and most pious of women, "our sheet anchor," and his father as a strictly honest man, excellently tempered, who—"like myself had neither ballast nor reflection." Despite his humble upbringing, young Gardiner contrived to obtain some semblance of education. At first he attended an academy presided over by a Mr. Sisson Darling, where he was "esteemed an ordinary boy," but this did not prevent him from being "selected, according to annual custom to represent on a rostrum, Cardinal Wolsey," upon which occasion "precious work I dare say I made of it," he afterwards confessed. In considering the early influences of Gardiner, the atmosphere of his school life is worth noting. Mr. Darling was evidently a very original type of master.

Neither he nor his ushers assumed any power to punish the slightest offence. A book was kept in school, in which the transgressions of every week were registered, with the proofs and evidence to the same. On Saturday the master sat as Judge, and twelve of the senior boys as jury, and every offender was regularly tried and dealt with according to justice. There was no venal judge, whose passions became law—there was no packed jury to defeat the ends of truth. If ever there was an immaculate court of justice, that was it. Early evidencing a taste for drawing—he himself termed it an itch—some kind friends enabled Gardiner to pursue his penchant for art, and for three years he studied at the Dublin Academy where he gained a silver medal. In later life he amusingly spoke of his first artistic effort as being "an attempt to immortalize Mr. Kennedy, my mother's foreman; and vanity apart, it was at least as like to him as it was to anyone else."

At this period Gardiner's talents began to expand: in his own words, "I rode tolerably, I hunted passably, I shot well, I fished well, I played on the violin, the dulcimer, and the German flute, tolerably, and my fondness for painting strengthened every day." He found, and this belief remained with him to the end, that he could easily make himself a second-rate master of any acquirement he chose to pursue.

In due course, like most young men of his time, Gardiner became fired with the ambition to come to London. Probably, like Whittington, he fondly imagined its streets to be paved with gold, but the lights o' London, as we shall see, proved to be no more friendly to poor Gardiner than they have been to many other venturesome seekers. In his case the Latin proverb Veni, vidi, vici requires modification: he certainly came, he certainly saw, but he most certainly did not conquer. First of all he supported himself by fashioning black shade profile miniatures for a shadow-portrait manufacturer—a Mr. Jones, in the Strand, who made "reflecting mirrors" and cut profiles in brass foil, denominated "polite remembrances to friends." Gardiner's job was to "daub the portraits of any who were fools enough to sit to me." The pay was little for the skill required, and so Gardiner, ever restless, tried his fortune on the stage, joining a travelling company as scene-painter and actor. The manager was a Mr. Davis, who had played with Foote, and who was endeavouring to establish a theatre of his own at Mile End. Gardiner played comedy, and occasionally tragedy—a line of business for which his experience of life surely fitted him—and his last appearance was made as Darby in the Poor Soldier at the Haymarket Theatre. Success passed him by, although it is possible that he attained some small eminence in the histrionic art, which, properly developed, might have led to something. But to such a nature the stage evidently proved less fascinating upon close acquaintance than it had appeared to be at a distance. He declared that it suited not his finances or his stomach, and we next find him back at his old profession and employed by a Mrs. Beetham of Fleet Street. Somehow or other, one account says 'accidentally,' Gardiner shortly afterwards managed to scrape acquaintance with Francis Grose the antiquary, who, while thinking little of his talents as a painter, was yet struck with him, and particularly with his abilities as an engraver. Through his good offices, Gardiner found employment with R. Godfrey, the engraver of the "Antiquarian Repertory," and about this time he acquired some considerable skill as an engraver in the chalk or stipple manner. At his leisure he had engraved "an original design (stolen from Cipriani) of Shepherd Joe, in 'Poor Vulcan,'" and this he submitted to Messrs. Sylvester and Harding, the Fleet-street publishers who eventually took him into their employ. This engagement, Gardiner himself admitted "lasted through my best days": it was a great chance, and had he availed himself of it, his story might have been different. While with this firm he was engaged upon their Shakespeare Illustrated, Biographical Mirror, Memoirs of Grammont, The Economy of Human Life, etc., while many of the plates to Lady de Beauclerk's edition of Dryden's Fables were entirely his own. Among his colleagues on the staff was Bartolozzi. Whether he purposely modelled his style upon that of this artist or not, the fact remains that much of Gardiner's work bears a distinct resemblance, and he actually claimed as his own some of the plates bearing Bartolozzi's name. Subsequently he worked for Bartolozzi, and occasionally he painted, and during the years 1787-1793 he exhibited at the Royal Academy. At this period Gardiner must have been doing well as an engraver, and had he possessed stability of character and remained working at his profession, he might easily have profited by the opportunity given him. But no, he "never liked the profession of engraving. Gay, volatile, and lively as a lark, the process of the copper never suited me." An "unfortunate" summons from his father caused Gardiner to quit his employers and repair to his native place Dublin, where he contrived to squander what little money he had saved.

He soon returned to London, taking lodgings in the house of a Mr. Good, a stationer of Bond Street. While here he elected to play the part of Peeping Tom to his neighbours, with the result that he contracted an inflamed eye. The story may be read elsewhere, and it is only referred to here because Gardiner attributed to this indiscretion and its result his failure to obtain a living in other directions.

His next project can only be described as fantastic in the extreme. It was nothing less than to take Holy Orders! A little thought might have convinced him of the futility of his ambition, but nothing daunted he was, through the kindness of Dr. Farmer, entered at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Here he remained two years, but scenting little chance of obtaining a Fellowship he removed to Corpus Christi College, where, in 1797, he took his degree. Finding that his hopes of obtaining a Fellowship here were equally small, Gardiner relinquished his ecclesiastical ambitions, and again sought solace in his old profession. In London his former employer Harding engaged him to copy portraits. "In this the testimony of the best artists in England are my witnesses that I beat hollow every one else. It was a line which suited me, which I liked, but which my cursed stars would not patronize."

But the final folly—the crowning folly of a life of follies—was still to come. His prospects of the Church having vanished and his eyes beginning to fail rapidly, Gardiner set up as a bookseller in Pall Mall! Not that he was unsuited for this calling; he was not, inasmuch as he possessed a considerable knowledge of books, and had delved much into the lore that is a necessary complement to this profession. But his manner and personality were such as to preclude him from success. His eccentric appearance, behaviour, and conversation brought him some notoriety, and although many people visited his shop out of curiosity, his business did not thrive. The remarkable thing is that it should have survived as it did for thirteen years !

In his Bibliomania, Thomas Dibdin has thus caricatured Gardiner under the name of "Mustapha" :

LIS. Now, tell me who is yonder strange looking gentleman ?

" 'Tis Mustapha, a vendor of books. Consuetudine invalescens, as veluti callum diuturna cogitatione obducens, he comes forth, like an alchemist from his laboratory, with hat and wig 'sprinkled with learned dust,' and deals out his censures with as little ceremony as correctness. It is of no consequence to him by whom positions are advanced, or truth is established ; and he hesitates very little about calling Baron Heinecken a Tom Fool or . . . a shameless imposter. If your library was as choice and elegant as Dr. . . . ' he would tell you that his own disordered shelves and badly coated books presented an infinitely more precious collection ; nor must you be at all surprised at this—for, like Braithwait's Upotomis,

' Though weak in judgment, in opinion strong ' ;
or, like the same author's Meilixos,

' Who deems all wisdom treasur'd in his pate.'
our book-vendor, in the catalogues which he puts forth, shews himself to be ' a great and bold carpenter of words ' ; overcharging the description of his own volumes with tropes, metaphors, flourishes and commonplace authorities ; the latter of which one would think had but recently come under his notice, as they had been already before the public in various less ostentatious forms."

PHIL.—Are you then an enemy to booksellers, or to their catalogues when interlaced with bibliographical notices ?

" By no means, Philemon. I think as highly of our own as did the author of the Arosian library of the Dutch booksellers ; and I love to hear that the bibliographical labour bestowed upon a catalogue has answered the end proposed, by sharpening the appetites of purchasers. But the present is a different case. Mustapha might have learned good sense and good manners, from his right hand, or left hand, or opposite, neighbour ; but he is either too conceited, or too obstinate, to have recourse to such aid. What is very remarkable, although he is constantly declaiming against the enormous sums of money given for books at public auctions, Mustapha does not scruple to push the purchaser to the last farthing of his commission ; from a ready knack which he hath acquired, by means of some magical art in his aforesaid laboratory of deciphering the same ; thus adopting, in a most extraordinary manner, the very line of conduct himself which he so tartly censures in others.

PHIL.—Was this the gentleman whose catalogue (as you shewed me) contained the fascinating colophon of Juliana Berners' book of hawking, hunting, and heraldry, printed in the year 1486, subjoined to a copy of the common reprint of it by Gervase Markham—thereby provoking a thousand inquiries after the book, as if it had been the first edition ?

" The same," resumed I. " But let us leave such ridiculous vanity."
Gardiner retaliated with violent sarcasm in his catalogues. Dibdin, however, again referred to the controversy—in his Bibliographical Decameron—after Gardiner's death.

Alas, poor MUSTAPHA !—for, if you remember, he came next in the muster-roll before mentioned. Sore vexed was Mustapha at the character therein given of him. He was chafed to the quick ; and seized the very first opportunity of bedaubing his critic with as much dirt as he could conveniently hold in both hands—supplied, not from the kennel before his house, but from the filth behind his counter. I have since re-examined that character, and I must say it was ' done to the life '—it having been provoked by certain consequential airs, and ' ex cathedrâ ' positions, with which the said Mustapha chose occasionally to disport himself. Wretched man : his failings were almost diseases—or certain mental aberrations which seem to defy the control of reason. Yet was there a sort of ' breadth and bottom ' of character about Mustapha : he was consistent in his aberrations ; and his opinions were even courted, and his censures almost dreaded, by more than one supple bibliographer. He had talent ; but wanted sobriety, in every sense of the word, to apply it to right ends. If he was consistent in his loathings, he was also fixed in his friendships : and possessing one of the most squalid and woe-begone countenances imaginable, he had the delicious vanity to account himself comely, and to be 'beloved of the fair.' Happy Mustapha! . . . but I will no longer indulge a sportive strain: for his death was most miserable, and the grave received him, when, by his own confession, he was unfit for the living.

Dibdin's notes to the foregoing passage are well worth perusal; they include three suggested titles, etc., for pamphlets in reply to Gardiner's catalogues—excellent specimens of the satirical style of the XVIIIth century; but it is to be regretted that Dibdin had not better taste than to pursue his quarry beyond the grave.

He was an instance, of which there are many instances in this very stranger world, of uniting, in a person of the most dirty and dismal physiognomy, with the filthiest attire, the greatest possible share of conceit, vanity, and self-complacency. He would sit at a book-sale (as he did that of the Roxburghe) with his hat cocked on one side—stroke his chin, flourish his pencil, and deal out his gibes against the fraternity, whilst his garments were of a hue and scent that absolutely forbade approach! Yet he could, in his self-memoir, talk of persons 'greatly his inferiors in every respect, towering above him; whilst the most contemptible amongst them, without education, without a knowledge of their profession, and without an idea, had been received into palaces, and into the bosom of the great,' etc.

Dibdin goes on to say that in the 'dealing out of death-blows' such as these Gardiner must have been little short of insane, when it is recollected that he was surrounded by men of such long established reputation as Nicol, Payne, Evans, and Triphook.

However, Gardiner had those who chose to consult him, and who exhibited prodigious powers in the mastication of slanderous intelligence. For himself, I will do him the justice to say that he was consistent: a liberal abuser of Toryism—and although he had taken a degree at Cambridge, and studied for the church, he was not eclipsed by Ritson himself in the acrimony of his ecclesiastical antipathies.

It is a wise axiom that Politics should not be allowed to enter into business: Gardiner made this fatal mistake, but then his whole life was but one succession of mistakes. Politically a Whig, he declared his sympathies and opinions with considerably more freedom than was good for him. He described his former schoolmaster, Darling, as being the only true Whig schoolmaster he had ever heard of.

The business of Gardiner's bookshop—what little it ever had—declined and he with it. He became dirty—he was an inveterate snuff-taker—careless, depressed. It is more than probable that he was encouraged and consoled these thirteen years by the woman he had married. Described as a respectable and interesting young woman, Miss Seckerson had become his wife much against the wish of her friends. Certain it is that without her help, moral and financial, he could not have kept going. With the death of his wife, and his child, poor Gardiner's knell was sounded. He became more careless than ever, his person and premises were equally filthy, and yet gentlemen "of the first respectability" continued to frequent his shop and listen to his brilliant but eccentric talk.

At last, plagued with ailments both bodily and mental, and saddened by his domestic losses, Gardiner at the comparatively early age of 48 years died by his own hand. The night before his death he penned a letter to the Editor of the Morning Chronicle, who had shewn him many kindnesses, in which he gave some brief account of his life. "If you shall find it of no other use, it will at least serve to light your fire," he concluded. He declared that his sun had set, that his business had declined, his catalogue failed, his body was covered with disease, so that he was determined to seek that asylum where the weary are at rest.

Gardiner made a sad mess of life, and it is to be feared that it was greatly of his own doing. His story shows that there is such a thing as romance, and further, that romance, contrary to the popular conception, is not roses all the way. Whatever he was, whatever his faults, he was no inconsiderable person, and he was no slave to convention. His career is an instance of much, and frequently great ability, sadly misapplied and misdirected. His was a restless spirit: had it allowed him to concentrate upon but one of the many callings he essayed, his end might have been different. As already stated, he was a veritable Jack of all trades, passably good at very many things and excellent at nothing. He lived his life in his own weak way: it was his life, and he was master even to the taking of it. That was his philosophy. It was wrong, of course, for if society owes nothing to an individual, that individual certainly owes something to society.

Gardiner was a prime eccentric. To appear to be cast in a different mould to the generality of one's fellows is to be labelled odd. It requires courage and a strong personality to be out of the ordinary—to detract one iota from the regulation path. Herein lays Gardiner's claim to notice: he occupies a distinct niche in that delightful age of eccentricity and the curious, the XVIIIth century. In these modern times, so replete with rule of thumb, when even dress has been reduced to a rote of dull drab uniformity, the day of the eccentric would seem to be over. Where are they to-day? Where can one be pointed out? If they exist they must surely have inherited much of the mantle of Sampson Brass, for they are invisible wanderers among the byeways of our present time.

COLLOQUIALISMS

I must confess to considerable surprise and some disappointment, that no one has accepted my invitation to reply to the somewhat scathing remarks made by "A Book Collector" in the article "Some Points for Secondhand Booksellers" printed in the last issue of "B.A.R." (vol. 18, part 4). The editor of The Clique, commenting on this article in his issue of March 11th, admits that some of the points raised are worthy of consideration, and confirms what I said that it is useful sometimes "to see ourselves as others see us."

But however much the appointments of some booksellers' shops and the methods and habits of some booksellers themselves, may be objected to by collectors, there is certainly something to be said on the other side. I fully expected some Bookseller, sans reproche, would have retaliated by giving us "Some Points for Collectors." For there is no doubt that at times most booksellers have been sorely tried by the foibles of a certain class of book-buyer, who comes into our shops, disarranges our shelves, wastes our time, and buys nothing in the end. This class of collector is by no means so uncommon as might be supposed. Which reminds me of the story of the fed-up bookseller who waited patiently on one of these gentry for an hour or more without doing any business. So when the prospective buyer at last enquired the price of a rare pamphlet entitled "A sure guide to Hell," the bookseller, seeing his chance, blandly replied "Oh, take it and welcome if you'll only use it."

"THE CLIQUE"

The editor of our esteemed contemporary, the self-styled "Booksellers' Best Friend," The Clique, pays a graceful compliment of "B.A.R. in his issue of March 11th. He describes our annual volume 18 (just out) as "an excellent thirty bob's worth" and emphasises the fact that in size it beats all previous records, extending as it does to nearly 900 pages, containing 16,764 records. But, as I explained on page lii. in that volume, subscribers must not expect such a size every year, for as "B.A.R." only professes to give from 14,000 to 15,000 records annually, it is an obvious truth that the more there is in "B.A.R." for the subscriber, the less there is in it for the proprietress. One cannot live on hudos alone, and that is about all there is left in the last volume. But it is different with The Clique for when any weekly number "swells wisely" the Editor rubs his hands and chuckles, for every line filled up counts, as the washerwoman said.

"THE LONDON MERCURY."

Another "Bookseller's Friend" is the London Mercury, for, quite apart from the very high standing that enterprising journal has so rapidly taken in the literary world, its advertising section for booksellers is fast becoming the very best medium "as ever was." Based on the high standard maintained ever since its foundation, the circulation of the Mercury rises higher and higher. Hence its advertisements will correspondingly be more and more likely to bring quick-silver to the booksellers represented therein.

BIBLIOGRAPHIES OF MODERN AUTHORS.

I am pleased to see that Messrs. Leslie Chaundy & Co. are continuing their admirable and useful series of "Bibliographies of Modern Authors." No. 4, just to hand, contains the works of J. C. Squire and James Stephens. The dainty little volume is compiled by Mr. I. A. Williams and is elegantly printed in red and black, on hand-made paper, by "B.A.R.'s" own printers, Messrs. Harding and Curtis, of Bath. The production does infinite credit to all concerned. The innate modesty of J. C. S.'s Prefatory Letter should not be overlooked when, in due time, his biographers get to work. No collector of the works of modern authors should be without these useful little lists. To booksellers also they should prove invaluable manuals of reference.

"AUTOGRAPH PRICES CURRENT."

The lamented death, in 1920, of Mr. E. H. Courville (well known and loved by all frequenters of Sotheby's), made it impossible for a time to continue the issue of his most useful publication Autograph Prices Current. But Mr. A. J. Herbert, the new editor, has now resuscitated the work and caught up arrears. Volume V., comprising the two years' period from August 1919 to July 1921 inclusive, has just been issued. Owing to the unavoidable delay in collecting the necessary material, and the difficulties involved in so doing, it has been thought best to confine this volume chiefly to the Autograph Letters and Historical and Literary Documents which have passed through Sotheby's Auction Rooms during that period. No attempt has been made in this volume to deal with Illuminated Manuscripts, but Mr. Herbert informs me that the next volume, due in the autumn, will include the records of Illuminated Manuscripts sold since 1919. The present volume extends to viii. + 228 pages, and as a manual or reference for either the collector or dealer, it is absolutely indispensable. An exhaustive Index enhances its usefulness. Intending subscribers should apply to Mr. A. J. Herbert, 1 Barton Street, Westminster, S.W.1. The price is, I believe, 25s.

"A NEW JACKET FOR OLB BOOKS."

That enterprising journal the Boston Evening Transcript, for March 11, has an interesting article under the above heading, which turns out to be an illustrated interview with our worthy confrere, Charles Goodspeed of Boston. As his Park Street store could no longer hold all his stock he has opened a new shop in Ashburton Place, "fitting his old books into a new jacket you might say." Judging by the illustrations, the new store must be a sort of haven of rest as compared with some of our English bookstores as described by 'A Book Collector' in our last issue. Charlie is evidently a bit of a sport, for he keeps a guest-book, wherein his customers inscribe their names and he provides them with a cosy fireside-corner wherein to do it. According to the B. E. T., Charlie believes in giving his patrons a run for their money, for he is reported as saying "Customers come to an old book-shop precisely as fishermen to a trout-brook. Their great job lies in finding the unexpected prize in the unexpected place, and this above all else an old book-store must strive to make possible for its patrons." I think I must take a hint from this and try to wake up business by doing a little mine salting myself, as it evidently pays. His English friends will, I am sure, join in wishing Goodspeed the best of success in his new venture.

THE "BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS" INDEX.

Subscribers will be glad to learn that the huge task of printing the Index is proceeding satisfactorily. I hope to be in a position to make a further and more definite announcement in Part 2 of the current volume.

SOLUTION OF THE "BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS" PUZZLE.

In Part 2 of Vol. 18 I offered two prizes for the solution of a very interesting puzzle, based on the 18 letters comprised in the words "BOOK AUCTION RECORDS." The problem was two-fold: firstly, to so arrange the letters that they could be read the greatest possible number of times by using a total number of letters not exceeding the square of the number of letters in the words "BOOK AUCTION RECORDS" (that is to say, not exceeding  $18 \times 18 = 324$ ), and secondly, to state the actual number of times the words could be read when the letters were so correctly placed. The result of the first part of the Puzzle was announced in Vol. 18, part 4, page li., and the prize of a year's subscription to "B.A.R." was awarded to an American gentleman for the only correct diagram sent in. I printed the diagram on page lii., and invited readers of "B.A.R." to send in solutions of the number of times the words "BOOK AUCTION RECORDS" could be read therein, according to the terms and conditions originally specified on page xix. of Vol. 18, Part 2. The prize was to be two years' subscription to "B.A.R."

I regret to say that no solution, even approximately correct, has been sent in. The calculation has either proved too difficult to be attempted, or no one in these strenuous days has been able to devote the necessary time to the effort. And yet, I do not hesitate to say that this problem is really one of the most interesting and intricate of its kind that has ever been propounded.

* * *

Of the solutions sent in, not one has even approached one per cent. of the correct total. The highest number submitted is 840, accompanied by two large explanatory diagrams, showing each journey from letter to letter by a line, so that the whole resembles the ground plan of an enormous block of railway sidings and junctions. But the puzzle is not to be solved that way, as will be seen below. The gentleman who sent in these diagrams tells me that the puzzle is of a type often met with in the colophons of early printed books, but in single squares, not in quadruple form like the "B.A.R." diagram. But he is quite wrong in his supposition that our four squares are merely repetitions of each other, and that "one cannot start out from the centre in say a south-west direction and then double back to north-west." I thought so myself at first and considered the quadrupling of the square as redundant, but I ultimately discovered my error as will be seen below. As the highest number submitted, my 840 correspondent is at least entitled to honourable mention.

* * *

When I first adapted the puzzle from the Latin inscription on an old Spanish tomb, as described in Vol. 18, Part 2, I little dreamed of the difficulty I was to experience in arriving at the correct solution. The Latin inscription reads Silo Princeps fecit, and the letters were arranged exactly in the form of the "B.A.R." diagram given in Vol. 18, page lii. The printed description merely stated that the inscription could be read 270 different ways, but no particulars were given as to how that number was arrived at. As the Latin inscription contains only 17 letters, whilst "BOOK AUCTION RECORDS" has 18, I naturally supposed at first that the result would be slightly larger than 270, and that I should have little difficulty in arriving at it.

I soon found I had underrated the difficulty. But having set the puzzle and offered the prizes, it was absolutely necessary to work the problem out. I asked several mathematical friends to help me, but I only got indefinite promises to tackle the job when they could find time. No one did find time, but no one suggested that they could not solve the problem if they tried. At that time I had not the slightest idea how the solution was to be arrived at, for I could see no way of accurately registering the various readings after making them, for any one letter, say K, could not be distinguished from any other letter K. But one day it occurred to me that if I gave each individual letter a distinguishing number, I should be able to write out the various readings as I made them. I accordingly numbered the 323 letters in the diagram from 1 to 323 in regular rows from left to right, commencing with the letter S at the top left and ending with the S at the bottom right. A representation of the diagram so numbered is given herewith.

At first sight it appeared that the diagram consisted of four separate squares, each containing the letters of the words "BOOK AUCTION RECORDS" independently, save that the middle lines both upright and transverse were common to the adjacent squares. Hence, it appeared that it was only necessary to read one quarter and multiply the result by 4 to arrive at the total of the whole. Selecting the lower right quarter as the easiest to follow, I accordingly started out to record the various readings as I made them. I soon found, however, after writing a hundred or so that progress was going to be very tedious, and I began to see that even at the roughest estimate there would be at least several thousand readings!! As even one thousand written out on separate lines on ruled foolscap paper, with 33 lines to a page would extend to over 30 pages, I abandoned the attempt in despair.

I next tried to find some mathematical formula by which the various combinations could be accurately calculated, but here, again, I met with no success after the first nine letters or so. Eventually, I hit upon the idea of setting out the readings in tabular form, after the manner of a pedigree chart, and got on very well for the first five generations, that is from B to A, when the offsprings became too numerous and cumbersome to be recorded in one line. But I noticed that although I had recorded 32 different and separate readings in working from B to A, the 32 were divided between the 5 letters A, Nos. 238, 220, 202, 184 and 166 in different proportions, viz.: A238, 2 readings; A220, 8; A202, 12; A184, 8; and A166, 2. It then becomes apparent that if I summed up at the end of each letter, the problem could easily be kept within workable bounds. Hence, as an example, it follows that if you can read from B 162 to A202 by 12 different routes, you can get through A202 the same number of times to U221, and also the same number of times to U203. But you can also get to U221 by 8 different routes through A220, so that altogether you can get from B162 to U221 in  $12 + 8 = 20$  different ways. Continuing thus, you can proceed through U221 to C222 in 20 different ways, but as you can also get to C222 in 20 ways through U203, you can actually read from B162 to C222 in 40 different ways, and so on.

* * *

Here, then, was the key to the solution, and working out the progression as far as the letter S323, I made it that you can read from B162 to S323 no less than 48,620 different ways. Multiplying this by 4 for the 3 other squares, I arrived at the prodigious and almost unbelievable grand total of 194,480.

But on working out the computation a second time, to check any clerical errors, I discovered that large as this total is, it was nearly 100,000 too small.

* * *

For, on re-examining the diagram, I found I was quite wrong in supposing that the four separate quarters were independent of each other save for the middle lines in common, and that if you reckoned up one quarter you had merely to multiply by 4 to arrive at the grand total. Were it not for the double letter O in the word "Book" this would be quite true. But the double letter O enables you to skirmish out, as it were, from the central B162 into two more of the remaining quarters, and yet get back again into your own territory, the lower right-hand quarter, which was the one originally selected to reckon up.

* * *

Working on this basis, still in the lower right quarter, I found that instead of only reading from B162 through O181, O182 and O163, I could also read through O180, O161, O143 and O144 and yet back to the 5 A's in that quarter, viz.: A238, A220, A202, A184 and A166 in 48 different ways instead of in only 32 as in my first attempt, explained above. Proceeding on this new basis I eventually arrived at the truly astonishing grand total of 291,720.

This number I believe to be absolutely correct and the highest possible. But if anybody can demonstrate a higher number I shall be very glad to be corrected. Here follows my final solution worked out in full so that anyone can easily follow it and check it by means of the accompanying diagram.

BOOKSELLERS' CATALOGUES.

N B.—All Booksellers should put "B.A.R." on their list of names, as one never knows where, in any part of the world, a notice of a catalogue attracts attention and leads to business. A charge of fourpence per line is made. As the Publishers of "B.A.R." are also Second-hand Booksellers, they are in the habit of receiving numerous catalogues in their own name, but these are not noticed in "B.A.R.," unless specially so marked.

THE PILLARS OF HERCULES

BOOKS OF THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

THE PILLARS OF HERCULES

By G. F. BARWICK, B.A.

THE voyage of the "Quest" has lately brought vividly before us the dangers that even now attend navigation in uncharted seas; but, nevertheless, brave men are no longer without fairly adequate means to face the perils and to find their way back when they have overcome them. But let us carry our minds back to the times preceding the discovery of the mariner's compass and think of the feelings of a seaman of old looking out from his boat in the Straits of Gibraltar at the Western Ocean sparkling and glowing in the sunset. How many a man must have longed for the means to sail on that Ocean with even a remote chance of getting back safely, and looking up at Calpe and Abyla, the "Pillars of Hercules," have asked himself "Are these really the limits of the World?" If he came from Italy or Greece he would recall some of the many legends that attempted to account for their position. How Hercules was sent by Eurystheus to fetch the herd of the triple-headed monster Geryon, from Erytheia, the ruddy island, so called from its illumination by the rays of the setting sun. How in order to cross the Ocean, he threatened the sun with his arrows and forced that luminary to lend him the golden bowl on which he nightly returns from West to East. And how, when he had safely landed the cattle on the Iberian coast, he restored the sun's bowl and set up the two pillars at the entrance of the Mediterranean to mark his success. He might wonder how far that island of Erytheia might be, and if he were a Carthaginian, it is just within the limits of possibility that he might have heard tell of some Western Isles, far distant and very difficult to reach; for Carthaginian coins have been discovered in the Azores.

The legends of the Pillars of Hercules assumed many other forms. According to some the herd of Geryon, after being landed on the west coast of the Peninsula were driven by Hercules to Libya across the pillars which he united into a bridge for the purpose. According to others, which do not connect the pillars with the Geryon labour, Hercules tore asunder the rocks which had before entirely divided the Mediterranean from the Atlantic. This led to an interesting speculation of the ancients that the Isthmus of Suez was formed by the lowering of the level of the Mediterranean through the new outlet, which was disputed by others who maintained that the level was raised by the influx of the Atlantic. On some of the coins of Carteia, a city that formerly existed close to Gibraltar, is found the club as symbol of the worship of Hercules, the instrument with which he severed the neighbouring rocks of Calpe and Abyla from one another when he opened the passage from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean. According to another legend Hercules narrowed the Strait so as to shut out the sea monsters which had previously come in from the Ocean and infested the inland sea.

When the Moors overran Spain they gave the name Gibraltar, "the mountain peak" to Calpe; the opposite headland is at Ceuta, from Septa, the seven peaks known as the seven brothers, which run to eastward of the town. They were not known to Homer as the Pillars of Hercules, but he appears to have some knowledge of the Straits from the manner in which he speaks of the passage of Ulysses out of the Sea into the Ocean and back again. The earliest distinct mention of the Pillars is by Pindar (5th cent., B.C.), who more than once names them as the point to which the fame of his heroes reached, but beyond which no mortal could advance. From this evidently came the connection of the motto NE PLUS ULTRA, No further, with the Pillars, and they represented the limits of the known world towards the West. This motto was used in the royal arms of Spain in allusion to the Pillars, but when the Emperor Charles V. came into possession of the vast regions added to the Spanish crown in the great period of discovery, he took away the negative and, retaining the Pillars as an emblem, placed the proud legend "PLUS ULTRA" upon them, as shown in the title-page here reproduced. The Pillars frequently appear in this form in Spanish official books of the middle of the sixteenth century, but usually in smaller size and combined with the arms of Spain.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL JOTTINGS

By GEORGE WATSON COLE, L.H.D.

JOT 1.—Having occasion recently to look up the different editions of Andrew Boorde's Dietary of Health, printed by Robert Wyer, we turned to Plomer's Monograph (1897), and found that he describes only an undated edition (No. 42), locating copies in the British Museum, Bodleian, and University Library at Cambridge. Turning next to his record of the publications of Wyer in the Hand-Lists of English Printers we found that he still (1913) records only the same edition and locates copies as aforesaid. Hazlitt, in his Hand-Book (1867) notes four different editions. Here was a discrepancy that called for investigation. Learning that the work had been reprinted by the Early English Text Society in 1870 (extra series, No. 10), we turn to that to find that Furnivall had gone with great thoroughness into the matter of the Wyer editions of this work. He first calls attention to Hazlitt's note (p. 46, No. 5), averring that he had mixed up matters very much, and that, instead of there being four editions or issue as recorded by him, there were only two, one of them dated, the other undated. A copy of the latter he locates in the Bodleian. Furnivall, in the introduction to his reprint, has treated the matter so carefully that he seems to have said the last word on the subject. Yet Plomer, who wrote some thirty years later, was apparently unaware of this research, and of the fact that more than one edition had been printed by Wyer. Furnivall could not resist this opportunity of giving his estimate of bibliographers. In a footnote he says "Some bibliographers (if not most) are sadly careless dogs." It may be said in passing that the critical scholar who does not exhaust every source of information regarding the work he attempts to edit and who does not collate carefully every copy of it that he can possibly lay his hands on, fails to perform his duty.

The bibliographer, likewise, should leave no stone unturned in tracing every clue to its ultimate source. To-day, both biographer and bibliographer, enjoy in research work advantages unknown to their predecessors. The invention of the rotograph, or photostat,—a cheap means of producing facsimiles—has so simplified the work of research, that it enables comparisons of widely separated copies to be made almost as easily as if they were side by side under the very eyes of the worker.

JOT 2.—In 1560 there was printed an edition of Edward More's Lytle and Bryefe Treatyse called the Defence of Women and especially of Englyshe Women, made agaynst the Schole House of Women. The Scholle House of Women is a work by Edward Gosynhyll. On looking up the bibliography of satires on women we turned to the Cambridge History of English Literature (Amer. ed., 3: 552), and there found the date of this work given as 1557, and also "a reprint or supplement" of 1562-3. Further search showed that these dates were the ones in which licenses had been granted to two printers to print the work. The book, however, was really printed in 1560 by John Kyng who took out the first license in 1557-1558 (Arber, Transcripts, 1: 79). It was licensed two or three years later to John Tisdale, but no copy with his imprint in now known (Arber, Transcripts, 1: 213).

Possibly the Short-Title List of English Books Printed Prior to 1641, now being prepared by the Bibliographical Society of London, may bring to light such a copy. As this projected work is based upon books that are in actual existence in English libraries rather than upon old bibliographies, we may expect, when it is published, to meet with many surprises; that many ghosts will be laid and that works and editions of whose existence we have been in ignorance will be brought to light.

JOT 3.—Dr. Henry M. Dexter, in the bibliographical appendix to his comprehensive work on Congregationalism, records a copy (in his own library) of William Euring's Answer to the Ten Counter Demands, propounded by T. Drakes [Draxe], [Leyden, W. Brewster], 1619. Of Thomas Draxe's work, to which Euring's is an answer, Dexter says it is "only known by Euring's reply." A copy of Draxe's Ten Counter-Demands, without place or date of publication, printed on a single quarto sheet, turned up at a miscellaneous sale at Sotheby's, July 27, 1911, and later, in the sale of the library of the late Charles L. F. Robinson, of Hartford, Conn., which was dispersed at auction at the Anderson Galleries, New York, April 30th and May 1st, 1917. This copy, which is believed to be unique, together with a photostat facsimile of Euring's work procured from the library of Yale University, to which Dexter's library was bequeathed, is now in the Huntington Library.

JOT 4.—Our attention may next be turned from work done by bibliographers to that done by biographers. It appears that they, too, drop into pitfalls, as witness the following delightful example taken from the National Cyclopædia of American Biography, published by James T. White Company of New York. Under the heading William Shirley, colonial governor of Massachusetts (b. 1693—d. 1771), we find (vol. 7: 375) the following novel information: "Governor Shirley was a writer of considerable ability." Among the works attributed to him we find Electra, a tragedy ("prohibited by the Lord Chamberlain"), and Bertha Hercules, a masque. The biographical melting-pot in this case has succeeded in amalgamating two William Shirleys, one the governor, the other a contemporary dramatist who flourished from 1739-1780 (Dict. Natl. Biog., 18: 143). The latter wrote several plays, among them, the Birth of Hercules, which appeared in 1765. This was doubtless the play the biographer had in mind. The above savours strongly of Grub Street and displays a most wonderful, as well as a humorous example of scrambled information.

We have long known that American literature began to burgeon in colonial days. George Sandys, adventurer and companion of Captain John Smith in the Virginia colony, translated the Metamorphosis of Ovid; later, Governor Hunter wrote a biographical farce entitled Androboros (our anonymous biographer would doubtless have modernized it to read Andrew bore us); but until quite recently we were unaware that Governor Shirley by the production of Bertha Hercules is entitled to be considered one of the stellar attractions of early American literature.

JOT 5.—When Furnivall had occasion to look up the different editions of Boorde's Dietary of Health he found that one of the four editions noted by Hazlitt "was only a title-page stuck before a titleless copy of Moulton's Glass of Health, on to which had been stuck a colophon from some other book of Weyer's printing." Here, then, were parts of three books so put together as to appear to be but one—a striking example of the snares that await the unobservant bibliographer in made-up copies. Little wonder then that those who have been hunting for a copy of this elusive edition have never been able to run it to earth.

Another case illustrating the introduction of fictitious editions into bibliographies occurs in the case of A Boke of Propertyes of Herbes supposed to have been written by Walter Cary. Ames (p. 150) had in his possession a copy of this book and bound with it "a booke of the urynes; . . . [printed by William Copland] For R. Kele, 12 August," 1552. This appears to be the copy that is now in the Bodleian (Bibliog. Soc., Hand-Lists; Copland, p. 4). Later bibliographers, who apparently took this entry as their source of information, have mistakenly given to Cary's book the date of the book with which it was bound. Another example of work done by one of Furnivall's "sadly careless dogs." In this connection, the Hand-Lists record a similar copy but printed "For A. Veale" instead of "For R. Kele," giving as authority "Heber V. 4119." On turning to Heber we find that The Boke of Propertyes of Herbes is not even mentioned; the Heber entry reading, "4119. Urynes, The Seinge of, W. Copland, 1552. The Treasure of Poore Men. R. Kele. n.d. 2 vol."

BOOKSELLERS' CATALOGUES.

N.B.—All Booksellers should put "B.A.R." on their list of names, as one never knows where, in any part of the world, a notice of a catalogue attracts attention and leads to business. A charge of fourpence per line is made. As the Publishers of "B.A.R." are also Second-hand Booksellers, they are in the habit of receiving numerous catalogues in their own name, but these are not noticed in "B.A.R." unless specially so marked.

FINDINGS IN BINDINGS.

BOETHIUS IN THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL OF ST. ALBANS (see page xxiii.)

FINDINGS IN BINDINGS

By G. F. BARWICK, B.A.
(Late of the British Museum).

"O H, if only people knew what treasures there are in old bindings." This was the exclamation of that typical scholar-librarian Henry Bradshaw when he was one day discoursing to a friend on the discoveries that had been made by himself and others in the examination of old bindings. One of his most remarkable finds is described in detail in his "Notice of a fragment of the Fifteen Oes and other Prayers, printed at Westminster by William Caxton about 1490-91; preserved in the Library of the Baptist College, Bristol," 1877. A volume from that library having come into his hands, he says (p. 3) "At the end the board was lined with a sheet of printed matter, which after having suffered from various rough attempts to lift it from the cover, I have lately soaked off without any difficulty, by the desire of the Rev. Dr. Gotch, the present Principal of the College." It proved to be a portion of one of Caxton's earliest works, the "Fifteen Oes and other prayers." The Oes are fifteen meditations on the Passion of Christ, sometimes attributed to Saint Bridget of Sweden, and called Saint Bridget's Prayers, each beginning with O Jesus, or a similar invocation. Further, the fragment was found to be a bit of "printer's waste," that is waste proof or cancelled sheets in the printer's office, which in the early dates when printers were their own bookbinders would be used by the binder for lining the boards or the centres of quires of books bound in the same office. It could thus be inferred almost with certainty that the book was a specimen of Caxton's binding, and that Caxton, like many other early printers, was his own binder. The importance of this fact for dating early issues from his press is very evident.

Of course it needs a scholar to recognize a fragment that is likely to be of importance, but even a binder's apprentice may have sufficient nous to suspect the possible value of ancient waste found in bindings. Many a great collector in former days, when bindings were little accounted of, used to send the shabby volume to be rebound, with small regard to the possible interest of the binding to say nothing of the fragments it might contain. That notable collector the Right Hon. Thomas Grenville, whose accumulated treasures now form such a valuable portion of the national collection, was certainly a sinner in this respect, but it is one of the only two book sins that can be laid to his charge. Even so it was due to his keen wish to see his books well cared for, with the pardonable vanity of liking to put his own name on their sides. It is in this connection that he committed the second sin, for alas! he was sometimes guilty of putting his modern stamp in the centre, and even in the centre ornament of a fine French binding.

Very few collections can nowadays show any considerable number of books of the fifteenth century and early sixteenth in the original bindings, but there are numbers of small private libraries, each containing a few, and while comparatively valueless, who can say what may be concealed in their bindings?

The tendency of late years has been to preserve old bindings as far as possible, and eminent collectors, both English and American, have adopted the slip-in case, the perfect way of at once preserving both the book and its binding. When several copies of the same book are seen to be in the same "contemporary" binding it may be conjectured that many, and in some cases all copies of that edition were issued in that form. A good instance of this is the memorial or black-bound edition of the "Eikon Basilike, 1648." Now, suppose that all the Shakespeare quartos could be brought together, it would seem possible that many might be in the binding of some well-known press, and in such case might there not be some valuable printer's waste in them? At all events the last hope of finding another bit of Shakespeare's handwriting seems to be limited now to the chance of a "find" in a binding of the early 17th century.

It is the practice in all large libraries for the binders to send up for examination all scraps found in old bindings, but probably this is only done to order, or when the binder thinks he has found something! Few collectors have ever troubled about such trifles, limiting themselves to the otherwise laudable object of putting a good book into a good binding.

Mr. Gordon Duff in his "Fifteenth Century English Books" (Bibliographical Society, 1917) reckons that at least ten per cent. of the literature of the fifteenth century is known to us only in fragments, most of which were found in bindings. From his extremely valuable work we see that Indulgences have been found in considerable numbers in bindings, and being single sheets they have in general escaped mutilation. Also fragments of Sarum Breviaries, Horæ, and other service books, and of law books. But by far the most interesting finds have been those in English literature; for instance a leaf of Wynkyn de Worde's Sir Eglamour, 1500; two small strips of Pynson's Ghost of Guy, 1492, being part of an unknown English version of the Speculum Guidonis; three leaves of an unknown and undated Guy of Warwick, also printed by Pynson; and a leaf of a similarly unknown and undated edition from the press of de Worde; also two leaves of an unknown Robin Hood, 1500, by the same printer. Mr. Gordon Duff's note on the fragments of the Sarum Ordinale (No. 336) is particularly interesting. He says: "the only existing fragments were found in the covers of a Caxton Boethius, in the Grammar School of St. Albans, along with a number of other waste sheets from Caxton's press, which are now in the British Museum."

From correspondence now placed with the fragments it appears that the Boethius was submitted to William Blades, of Caxton fame, who reported as follows: "The very small portions of printing now discernible show that the covers are made up of portions from three (if not more) different works printed by Caxton. 1st, a portion of a Latin Indulgence . . .; 2nd, a fragment of a Latin Directorium Sacerdotum; 3rd, a piece from the middle of Lidgate's poem of 'The Hors, the Ghoos and the Shepe.' The first two prove the existence of works by Caxton totally unknown, even by tradition, to later generations, and of the third I believe that not more than three copies are known to exist." The Directorium Sacerdotum was also called the Pica Sarum, or Salisbury Indicator, and gave a lasting name to the type in which it was usually printed [see illustration]. The Directorium contains a collection of rules showing how to deal with the concurrence of religious offices resulting from the variability of Easter and other movable feasts.

Bradshaw, in his above-mentioned "Notice," mentions one "find" among those in his "new field of enquiry" which is specially interesting as it carries a date beyond Gordon Duff's limit. He says, "Some years ago I obtained from Mr. F. S. Ellis a pad of leaves which had served for the board of a small volume which had evidently been bound for John Byddell while living at the Sun in Fleet Street, in which house he succeeded Wynkyn de Worde. The fragments were every one where traceable pieces of Sun-printed books, ranging from the "Four Sons of Aymon," printed there by Wynkyn de Worde in 1504 . . . down to an otherwise wholly unknown edition of "Adam Bel and Clim of the Clough," printed there by John Byddell in 1536."

In the bindings of Manuscripts as in those of Printed Books fragments, chiefly of manuscripts, have naturally been frequently discovered. The following instance, which is of remarkable interest, has recently come to my notice. A portion of a Latin Charter on vellum, taken from the cover of a manuscript, was one day brought to the British Museum, and upon examination was found to be in a North Italian hand of about the ninth century, and it was presented to the national collection by the owner. A few years later a different person brought another portion of the same charter, and fortunately submitted it to the same expert, whose practised eye at once recognized the handwriting. The charter records the sale of two pieces of land in the county of Todi (in Umbria, Italy) to the monastery of St. Leucius for thirty solidi, and forms probably the only record of the existence of this monastery at that very early date.

I cannot do better than conclude with Bradshaw's words, (p. 9 of the "Notice"), "I have for many years tried to draw the attention of librarians and others to the evidence which may be gleaned from a careful study of these fragments, and if done systematically and intelligently, it ceases to be mere antiquarian pottering." One is still left wondering how much has entirely disappeared and how much still awaits discovery.

BOOKSELLERS' CATALOGUES

N.B.—All Booksellers should put "B.A.R." on their list of names, as one never knows where, in any part of the world, a notice of a catalogue attracts attention and leads to business. A charge of fourpence per line is made. As the Publishers of "B.A.R." are also Second-hand Booksellers, they are in the habit of receiving numerous catalogues in their own name, but these are not noticed in "B.A.R." unless specially so marked.

The Booksellers of Little Britain: Some Notes.

By C. EDGAR THOMAS
(Secretary Sion College and Library).

LITTLE BRITAIN! Is not there a magic, a fascination about the very name? Little Britain! It helps one to visualise the spot, so what need to go and see it for oneself? A kind of London backwater. A backwater that was virtually a township or village within the City—a local corporation with its own customs, its rules of life, its unwritten laws. A backwater dignified and important in its day, but now, in its old age, fallen upon decayed and evil times, surviving as a collection of warehouses and tenements. Time was when it housed a little colony of booksellers; indeed the whole district was formerly wrapped in a literary mantle, for was not Milton Street near-by, the Grub Street of Pope's obloquy in "The Dunciad"? It is a district difficult of description: Washington Irving has, perhaps, best of all recaptured its erstwhile spirit and atmosphere in his admirable Sketch—we know of no other author who has so successfully done so. Listen:

In the centre of the great City of London lies a small neighbourhood, consisting of a cluster of narrow streets and courts, of very venerable and debilitated houses, which goes by the name of Little Britain. Christ Church School and St. Bartholomew's Hospital bound it on the west; Smithfield and Long Lane on the north; Aldersgate Street like an arm of the sea divides it from the eastern half of the city; whilst the yawning gulf of Bull-and-Mouth Street separates it from Butcher Lane and the regions of Newgate. Over this little territory, thus bounded and designated, the great dome of St. Paul's swelling above the intervening houses of Paternoster Row, Amen Corner, and Ave Maria Lane, looks down with an air of motherly protection. . . . For some time Little Britain became the great mart of learning, and was peopled by the busy and prolific race of booksellers: these also gradually deserted it, and emigrating beyond the great strait of Newgate Street, settled down in Paternoster Row and St. Paul's Churchyard, where they continue to increase and multiply even at the present day.

We have this quarrel with Irving: he leaves the matter there, when, with that inimitable pen of his he could have written so much more.

But before considering Little Britain's booksellers a word or two regarding its etymology and its historical associations may not be out of place. In 1329 we find it called "Brettone strete"; temp. Hen. VIII. "Britten strete"; in 1550-1, "Peti Bretane"; ten years' later "Pety Bryttayne"; "Lyttell Bretton" in 1601-2; and "Little Bryttayne" about 1616. Stow attributes the name to the Dukes of Brittan having lodged there; and another *account has it that Little Britain was anciently Britain Street "from the City mansion of the Duke of Bretagne, in France, therein situate. Since which time, divers of the Nobility have had their City houses in this parish, viz., at the south-east corner of Little Britain, where the south part of the Hospital is situate, stood the Earl of Peterborough's house; and on the east side of the said street, and south side of Bartholomew Close, was seated that of Lord Montague." These Earls and Dukes of Bretagne, it may be said, were Alan the Red, who married Constance, daughter of the Conqueror; his son, Alan the Black; Stephen, his brother, who founded at York St. Mary's Abbey; Alan, Conan le Petit; and Geoffrey Plantaganet, 4th son of Henry II., who married Constance, daughter of Duke Conan. Their son was Arthur, Duke of Bretagne and heir presumptive to the throne of England, murdered at Rouen by the agents of his uncle King John. These Dukes eventually moved within the City wall, and ultimately to the Savoy Palace in the Strand. Their mansion, story says, stood near St. Bartholomew's church; while the house of the Lords Montague is still perpetuated by Montague Court. Sir Thomas Bodley, too, once lived in a spacious house, with a gallery and courtyard in front and a garden at the back, behind Petty France at Little Britain Gate.

* Maitland. "History of London." 1739.

From quite early times—that is, bibliographical times—Little Britain would seem to have been remarkable for its printers and booksellers. “Imprinted by John Awdeley dwelling in Little Britayne Streete, 1575,” tells its own story; although in common fairness it should be added that another imprint makes the said John Awdeley to be “dwelling by Great St. Bartelmewes beyond Aldersgate.” It is sufficiently near! In 1664 no less than four hundred and sixty pamphlets, so it is recorded, had been published within its borders in the short space of four years. Before the Great Fire booksellers were chiefly to be found here, in St. Paul’s Churchyard, Paternoster Row, and Moorfields. Two years later the blow fell, for most of the fraternity deposited their stocks for safety in the crypt of Old St. Paul’s, and, as events turned out, promptly lost their all. Evelyn, the Diarist, and Lord Clarendon estimated the loss at over £200,000.

After this calamity certain of the booksellers re-started business in their old haunts; but others migrated to Fleet Street, and it was some little time before the steady flow of returning wanderers, and the shifting of the trade from St. Paul’s Churchyard, combined to restore in a measure the old prosperity of Little Britain. From the losses of the Great Fire the Churchyard seems never to have recovered.

Of the general condition of Little Britain some few years later we may glean some particulars from Roger North’s “Life of the Hon. and Rev. Dr. John North,” which appeared in 1744.

“It may not be amiss to step a little aside to reflect on the vast change in the trade of books, between that time and ours. Then Little Britain was a plentiful and perpetual emporium of learned authors; and men went thither as to a market. This drew to the place a mighty trade; the rather because the shops were spacious, and the learned gladly resorted to them, where they seldom failed to meet with agreeable conversation. And the booksellers themselves were knowing and conversible men, with whom, for the sake of bookish knowledge, the greatest wits were pleased to converse. And we may judge the time as well spent there, as (in latter days) either in tavern or coffee-house; though the latter hath carried off the spare hours of most people. But now this emporium is vanished, and the trade contracted into the hands of two or three persons, who to make good their monopoly, ransack, not only their neighbours of the trade that are scattered about town, but all over England, ay, and beyond sea too, and send abroad their circulators, and in that manner get into their hands all that is valuable.”

It is to be feared that North has digressed into generalisations, but as his views bear upon our subject he may, perhaps, be allowed to continue.

“The rest of the trade are content to take their refuse, with which, and the fresh scum of the press, they furnish one side of a shop, which serves for the sign of a bookseller, rather than a real one; but, instead of selling, deal as factors and procure what the country divines and gentry send for; of whom each hath his book-factor, and, when wanting anything, writes to his bookseller, and pays his bill. And it is wretched to consider what pickpocket work, with help of the press, these demi-booksellers make. They crack their brains to find out selling subjects, and keep hirelings in garrets, at hard meet, to write and correct by the great; and so puff up an octavo to a sufficient thickness, and there is six shillings current for an hour and a half’s reading, and perhaps never to be read or looked upon after. One that would go higher, must take his fortune at blank walls, and corners of streets, or repair to the sign of Bateman, Innys, and one or two more, where are best choice, and better pennyworths. I might touch other abuses, as bad paper, incorrect printing, and false advertising; all of which, and worse is to be expected, if a careful author is not at the heels of them. But I fear I am led by these too far out of my way.”

And undoubtedly the writer has led us with him! Let us return to Little Britain. A writer of 1708 observes of the locality, “Here now live many eminent booksellers and other trades”; while Strype, in 1720, records that “This street is well built and much inhabited by booksellers, especially from the pump in Duck Lane, which is also taken up by booksellers, for old books.” In the XVIIIth century trading localities were far more specialised than now, and the bookselling world was no exception to this rule. From Macky's "Journey through England," we gather that the booksellers of ancient books in all languages were situated in Little Britain and Paternoster Row principally; those dealing in Divinity and the Classics centred round the north side of St. Paul's; Temple Bar, and its neighbourhood harboured those trading in law, history, and the drama; while the French booksellers were further westward, in the Strand. Says Macky, "It seems, then, that the bookselling business has been gradually resuming its original situation near this cathedral ever since the beginning of George I., while the neighbourhood of Duck Lane and Little Britain has been proportionately falling into disuse."

It will thus be seen that the star of Little Britain as a bookselling colony had set: by the middle of the century its trade was fast declining, and in 1756 we find Maitland describing the neighbourhood as "very ruinous," and the part from the pump to Duck Lane—formerly alive with booksellers—"now much deserted and decayed." But although its glory had departed, the old spot still retained some who dealt in books. Edward Ballard was the last of the long line of booksellers inhabiting Little Britain; he succeeded his father in 1761, and continued to carry on his business in educational and divinity books, until 1796, when he died at the ripe old age of 88 years, in the same house in which he was born.

But in the days that were earlier—in the "palmy days" as the old-time Barnstormer would say—Little Britain was a favourite resort of the quality. It was specially beloved of Swift and countless other bookmen and scholars of his age. Booklovers repaired there in search of French and Italian authors; students sought diligently for Greek and Latin texts; and the "Old Mourning Bush" in Aldersgate was rarely without its complement of patrons totalling up their "finds," and discussing, oft-times heatedly, the gossip of the day. Swift records many visits to the shop of Christopher Bateman (of whom more anon), and in his "Journal to Stella," at the beginning of 1711, informs that lady that he "went to Bateman's, the bookseller's, and laid out eight and forty shillings for books." Out of this sum he appears to have purchased "three little volumes of 'Lucian' in French for our Stella." A little later in the year the Dean was again at the same bookseller's "to see a fine old library he has bought, and my finger itched as yours would do at a china shop."

To have been the first London lodging of Dr. Johnson is no small distinction, and this honour belongs to Little Britain. The lexicographer says in the Annals of his early years, under date 1712, when he was three years old: "This year, in Lent, I was taken to London, to be touched for the evil by Queen Anne. My mother was at Nicholson's, the famous bookseller in Little Britain." And when Benjamin Franklin first came to London, a youth of eighteen summers, he found lodgings along with Ralph, in Little Britain, and subsequently obtained employment "at Palmer's, then a famous printing-house in Bartholomew's Close." His wages were "three shillings and six-pence a week—as much as they could afford," and he remained about a year. Franklin afterwards wrote: "When I lodged in Little Britain, I made an acquaintance with one Wilcox, a bookseller, whose shop was at the next door. He had an immense collection of second-hand books. Circulating libraries were not then in use; but we agreed that, on certain reasonable terms, which I have now forgotten, I might take, read, and return any of the books. This I esteemed a great advantage and made as much use of as I could." On another occasion he wrote thus to Sir Hans Sloane: "A line for me at the 'Golden Fan.' Little Britain, will be attended to."

Izaak Walton records of Bishop Sanderson of Lincoln that he met him accidentally in London, "in sad-coloured clothes, and, God knows, far from being costly." The place of their meeting was "near to Little Britain" where the worthy divine had been to purchase a book, which book he had in his hand.

To John Evelyn, Dr. Robert Plot sent this letter dated Oct. 2nd, 1693: "I must beg a favour of you in behalf of the University of Oxford, who are now publishing a tract of Plutarch's concerning Education and would gladly add another of St. Chrysostom publish't in France by Combesis in Greek, could they meet with the book. Paul's Churchyard and Little Britain have been search't for it without success, nor is there now any hopes left but in you."

Hogarth's name is also associated with Little Britain, although indirectly. A shop-bill for his sisters Mary and Anne "at the King's Arms joining to the Little Britain Gate," has been attributed to him, but it was probably a forgery.

Many fascinating figures have in the past trod the stones of Little Britain: many sparkling—and dreamy—eyes have peered into its shop windows, and many restless hands have fingered lovingly and enviously its literary wares. One without eyes to peer with, however, was poor Milton, who at the Restoration, was smuggled for safety into the inner fastnesses of Little Britain. One knows not the house or whose it was, beyond the fact that it was "a friend's house in Bartholomew's Close." Here the poet was occasionally to be seen tenderly led by Millington, the bookseller. May not his temporary refuge have been that bookseller's own home? Jonathan Richardson declares that it was; let us hope he was right. At this time Milton's domestic affairs were sore troubled; his third marriage had alienated his children—his daughter Mary is reported to have said that a marriage was no news, but that "if she could hear of his death that were something"—and they had conspired to sell his books. There is a little story of the Earl of Dorset once book-hunting in Little Britain, when he picked up "Paradise Lost." Dipping into it he was much struck with certain passages, and he bought it. The bookseller begged him if he liked the work to speak well of it, "for that it lay on his hands as waste paper." The Earl took it home, read it, and sent it to Dryden. And Dryden returned it in a short time, saying "This man cuts us all out, and the ancients too."

Edward Millington was an auctioneer as well as a bookseller. A man of wit and great fluency of speech, he commenced book auctions "upon the authority of Herodotus who commends that way of sale for the disposal of the most exquisite and finest beauties to their Amorosos, and further informs the world, 'that the sum so raised was laid out for the portions of those to whom nature had been less kind.'"

A contemporary said that "there was usually as much comedy in his "Once, Twice, Thrice" as can be met with in a modern play." "Where," Millington is recorded as having once said, "is your generous flame for Learning? Who but a sot or a blockhead would have money in his pocket and starve his brains?" That he was capable of a sly jest is proved by his remark to Dr. Cave who, one day, bidding too leisurely for a book, Millington said, alluding to a recent publication of the doctor's, "Is this your Primitive Christianity?" In 1684, Millington sold "at the Auction-house opposite the Black Swan in Ave Maria Lane," the library of Dr. John Owen, Vice-Chancellor and Dean of Christ Church. At the "Rolls' Auction-house in Petty Canons Alley" he was responsible for the disposal of the books of Dr. Cudworth, Master of Christ's College, Cambridge, in 1690, and some few years later for those of the antiquary-astrologer Elias Ashmole. He died at Cambridge, and the following elegy was composed to his memory.

"Underneath this marble stone
Lives the famous Millington:
A man who through the world did steer,
I' th' station of an auctioneer;
A man with wond'rous sense and wisdom blest,
Whose qualities are not to be express't."

For much of our knowledge of booksellers in general and those of Little Britain in particular, we are indebted to old John Dunton, a note regarding whom may not be out of place. Dunton was a curious oddity of life, a clever but eccentric bookseller, whose later years were clouded by insanity. His ever-ready pen—and he was never at a loss for a subject upon which to exercise it!—occasioned him a voluminous writer. Born at Graftham, Huntingdonshire, of which place his father was Rector, in 1659, he was intended and educated for the Church, but his temperament was restless and not given to the study of dry theological disquisitions. When he was fifteen years of age we find him apprenticed to a Mr. Thomas Parker, bookseller. He did not stop long; he ran away, emigrated, and travelled over New England. On coming back he became diligent at his business, and learned to "love books." He saved money and opened a bookshop at the sign of the Black Raven, 'opposite to the Poultry,' where for ten years he contrived to earn his living. For a time he prospered, issuing the "Athenian Gazette," 1690-96, and "The Dublin Scuffle," a work concerned with rambles in Ireland, among other books. But his matrimonial troubles were not a few! as all may read, and his business suffered in consequence. His appeals to George I. for help came to nothing, and after a period of poverty, poor Dunton expired "in obscurity." He is best remembered by his "Life and Errors of John Dunton," 1705, which is at once interesting and curious. It includes much genuine autobiographical matter, and is invaluable as a chronicle of the literary trade of his age.

An outstanding bookseller of Little Britain was Christopher Bateman, who specialised principally in old books. From all accounts he was a thoroughly competent man. "There are few booksellers in England (if any)," says Dunton, "that understand books better than Mr. Bateman, nor does his diligence and industry come short of his honesty." He was accounted a man of integrity and reputation, and was further "the son of that famous Bateman, who got an alderman." Bateman is interesting as having killed—at least as regards his own business—a time-honoured custom which obtained among many of his contemporaries. This was the precursor of the subscription library as we now know it—the privilege of allowing potential customers the run of the booksellers' shops, so that they could examine and read books without taking them away. For this they paid a small subscription. Chairs and stools were sometimes provided for the convenience of visitors and if the book was not finished with at one sitting it was reserved for the reader against his second coming. Obviously the system had its drawbacks from the bookseller's point of view, and Bateman abandoned it with the explanation: "I suppose you may be a physician or an author, and want some recipe or quotation; and if you buy it, I will engage it to be perfect before you leave me, but not after as I have suffered by leaves being torn out, and the books returned to my very great loss and prejudice." It was said, perhaps untruly, that Bateman would not allow anyone to scan his books unless they purchased them. It has already been stated that Swift frequented his premises.

On the authority of Roger North, Robert Scott of Little Britain was, in his time, "the greatest librarian in Europe." His business was an extensive and flourishing one, for besides his stock of books in England, he had warehouses at Paris, Frankfort, and other cities, and "dealt in factors." The Hon. and Rev. Dr. John North dealt with Scott, whose "sister was his grandmother's woman," and upon that slender acquaintance, North expected and received much valuable bibliographical information and advice. In his old age Fate played Scott a sorry trick. With a comfortable competence he decided to retire, contracting with Mills of St. Paul's Churchyard "near £10,000 deep, and articulated not to open his shop any more." Mills, however, had too many irons in the fire, what with his auctioneering, atlases, and other projects, and he failed. Scott, in consequence, 'lost above half his means,' but the soul of honour, he kept to his bargain of not opening his shop. Says Roger North:

"He was not only an expert bookseller, but a very conscientious good man; and when he threw up his trade, Europe had no small loss of him. Our Doctor (i.e. Dr. John North, Professor of Greek and Master of Trinity College, Cambridge) at one lift, bought of him a whole set of Greek Classics in folio, of the best editions. This sunk his stock at that time; but afterwards, for many years of his life, all that he could (as they say) rap or run, went the same way."

The sign of "The Dolphin," Little Britain, was the business headquarters of Samuel Buckley, noticeable as being the printer of the first daily newspaper, the "Daily Courant," which he appears to have taken over from a bookseller named Mallet. Buckley also printed the "Monthly Register," and was also printer and publisher of the "Spectator" (jointly with Jacob Tonson) of which paper he issued seven of the original folio volumes. Originally a bookseller, it was only afterwards that Buckley took up printing. "His sun first set in a bookseller's shop, but dawned again in the printer's art." A clever man at his business, he was no mean scholar, a gifted linguist, and a passable wit. In 1714 he disposed of the "Daily Courant," to take over the publication of the "London Gazette." John Dunton was responsible for an eulogistic—and occasionally fulsome!—account of Buckley—an account which is not untinged with sly sarcasm, but which is too long to quote here. From it we learn that Buckley was an ingenious honest man of liberal education, a generous friend, an obliging servant, and a just and sober citizen. Dunton nicely strikes the balance—"he is neither effeminate nor a common courtier." He was apparently not exacting in his dealings with either author or bookseller, "and if his servant mistake but a word in an advertisement, he will print it again for nothing." And as a critic he possessed more than average ability—"If any Athenian might sit as a judge upon other men's writings, it is Mr. Buckley, for he has many perfections that no other newsmongers can pretend to." Again, his 'Daily Courant' is an abridgement of all news, as his life is of all virtues, and, as he orders the matter, is a sort of universal intelligence." In an age of political jugglery it is not remarkable that Dunton should ascribe Buckley's success to "his early zeal for the Hanover succession," and that

'Mr. Buckley is now, by the rays of his great loyalty, wit, and virtue, most deservedly made a Justice of the Peace, and will keep his coach in a few years, as a just reward for his Daily labours to serve the publick.'

Dunton concludes :

"Then Sam good b'ye to ye, your fame is so ticklish a point I shall leave it, and desire the world would take a fair draught of Mr. Buckley's character from the living original, to be seen every day at the Dolphin in Little Britain."

In April, 1712, Buckley suffered a temporary eclipse, for he was brought in custody to the Bar of the House of Commons, and charged with having inserted in his paper a Memorial of the States General severely reflecting upon the conduct of the English government in relation to the terms of peace. He was sent to prison ! and for no worse offence than reproducing a foreign State Paper as an article of news. Buckley is also interesting as having obtained an Act of Parliament "for granting to Samuel Buckley, Citizen and Stationer of London, the sole liberty of printing and reprinting the History of Thanus." While this Bill was before Parliament, he issued "A short state of the Public Encouragement given to Printing and Book-selling in France, Holland, Germany, and London. With Reasons humbly offered to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled for granting to Samuel Buckley such Privilege for Thanus in Latin as is already granted to every British subject who is possessed of the copy of any book in English." Buckley's epitaph in Hornsey church, is quite in keeping with the florid touch of XVIIIth century mural inscriptions :

To the Memory of SAMUEL BUCKLEY,
who, having not only discharged
all the duties of life with ability, industry and tenderness to each relation ;
but offices likewise of state and trust with prudence, fidelity, and gratitude to his benefactors ;
concluded his days in the study of letters and the enjoyment of honest and honourable friendships, Sept. 8th, 1741, in the 68th year of his age.

Although not born actually in Little Britain, William Bowyer, "the learned printer," himself the son of a printer, was brought up there, for his father, a month or two after the son's birth moved from Whitefriars, and commenced business at the sign of the White Horse. Bowyer is an interesting figure, but space will not allow his story to be told now.

The last of the Little Britain booksellers was Edward Ballard, a fact that has already been stated, and it is probable that the name of his family will always be associated with the district. For close upon a hundred years the name of Ballard was known in connexion with school books and divinity catalogues, while the family were ever ardent supporters of Church and State. Thomas Ballard was the first of the house, and he was characterised by Dunton in 1705 as "a young bookseller in Little Britain, but is grown man in body now, but more in mind :

"His looks are in the Mother's beauty drest
And all the Father has inform'd his breast."

He was one of the first to sell books by marked catalogues. Samuel Ballard, his son, was for many years Deputy of the Ward of Aldersgate Within, and died on August 27th, 1761. The grandson, Edward, passed out with the business, in 1796. He had outlived his mental faculties, and towards the end was wheeled round in his chair.

In this short survey only the more important booksellers of Little Britain have been noticed. There were, of course, many lesser lights. Of those of some century earlier some brief account may be gleaned from Richard Smyth or Smith's quaint "Obituary," a catalogue of all such persons as he knew in his lifetime, extending from 1627 to 1674. Among these who were booksellers in Little Britain, we light upon the names of Francis Hill, who died at Westminster, Sept. 9th, 1644; Lancelot Toppyn, obit. Nov. 17th, 1646; Daniel Fryer, buried, April 16th, 1649; Mistress Sadler, wife to Lau. Sadler, "bookseller in Little Britain," buried Sept. 21st, 1649; Richard Myn, who died in 1654-5; John Jones, who died Aug. 9th, 1665, "of a consumption, in the country"; and James Davis, buried Aug. 9th, 1656. On March 16th, 1661-2, there died Mistress Littlebury, curiously described as "ye first wife to Mr. Robert Littlebury, bookseller in Little Britain." Littlebury, together with Robert Scott appraised the value of Dr. Castell's collection of Bibles, etc., at £20. The collection comprised some 30 folio volumes, and included the Antwerp Latin Bible, 1542, Tindal's English Translation, Beza's New Test., 1582, and copies of the scriptures in French, Spanish, and Latin. Elsewhere, Smyth records a tragedy: "Thomas Hardesty, bookseller in Duck Lane, a poore man, willingly leaping out of his window into the street three stories high, broke his neck and so died." Another entry reads: "Dec. 20th, 1667, Edward Croft, bookseller against St. Buttolph's Church in Little Britain, died, hora 5ta ante merid."; his relict, remarried since to Mr. Blagrave, an honest bookseller, who live happily in her house in Little Brittain." Whether the business of Andrew Croke, King's printer, was situated in Little Britain or not is uncertain—probably it was not—for Smyth simply records that "A. C., bookseller, this evening (Sept. 20th, 1674) died, being well the day before among his acquaintance in Little Brittain; my old acquaintance." Yet another was Cornelius Bee, of whom we read: "died, his 2 eldest daughters, widdows executrixes, buried Jan. 4th at Great St. Bartholomew's, without a sermon, without wine or wafers, only gloves and rosemary." From remaining entries we learn that the following also were old-time booksellers of Little Britain: Thomas Williams; Richard Chiswell; Moses Pitt; Mr. Nedham; and (in Duck Lane) Mr. Nealand; Richard Cartwright; John Crook, "buried at Botolph's, Aldersgate"; and Sam. Thompson, "a good husband and industrious man in his profession." John Dunton, but John Nichols seldom, curiously enough, has left us some particulars of others. Included among these are Christopher Hussee or Hussey, a bookseller who had always on hand a large stock of scarce items. He was a man of moderation, and Dunton's "good friend." Similarly a Mr. Nowel was "a first-rate bookseller in Duck Lane," who owned a well-furnished shop, "and knows books extraordinary well." These he would "sell off as reasonably as any man," while Dunton accounted him a most ingenious tradesman. Another dweller in Duck Lane was Mr. Hubbald, who had been unfortunate, "and so I think is everybody one time or other." Dunton unfortunately supplies us with little information of him, beyond a fatuous homily. He says: "If we eye his carriage to his rich Uncle, we shall find how his courage and wisdom carried him with an unwearied course through both Hemispheres of Prosperity and Adversity; compassing, as I may say, the whole Globe of both Fortunes; so that, if we look upon Frank Hubbald, we may all learn that no Cross is too heavy for a Christian Resolution, nor any difficulty too hard for Honesty to conquer."

Little Britain was further for a time graced with the presence of Mr. Burroughs—"a very beautiful person, and his wit sparkles as well as his eyes." This worthy cherished a good address and great presence of mind; could on occasion be most diverting company, and was, in the opinion of Dunton, as well qualified to make an Alderman as any bookseller in Little Britain! It would seem that Dunton's descriptive powers began to give out, for we find him making one panegyric do the duty of two! as witness:

"Mr. Harrison, in Chancery-lane. He is a man free from faction, noise, and anger: not so weak as to give such an advantage as any man must have who contends with one that is stark blind—as how much better is he that is passionate. He is a diligent man in his Shop, a kind Neighbour, and a religious Master, teaching his Servant better by his own example than all the Tutors in both Universities.

John Dunton, to whom we have already expressed our indebtedness, concludes his notices of contemporary booksellers thus: "But I will stop here; for it would be tedious and unconscionable to go through all Cheapside, Paul's Churchyard, Little Britain, and Duck Lane, to describe every man, woman, and sucking-child, Bookseller, Auctioneer, Stitcher, Hawker, etc." We can only sigh, Would that old John Dunton had been minded to continue!

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

These records are necessarily exact reproductions, abbreviated, of the catalogue-descriptions, and the editor disclaims responsibility for grammatical or other errors which may appear therein, unless such errors are obviously typographical misprints in the originals. Where no sizes are given the books are 8vo. et infra. Where no binding is stated it is understood to be the original cloth or paper covers, as published. The following is a key to the abbreviations:—

a. u. n. =	absque ulla nota	ills. =	illustrations
advts. =	advertisements	ist =	first
Anr. Edn =	Another edition	I. g. =	gothic letter
bnd. =	bound	L.P. =	Large Paper
B. l. =	Black Letter	lib. =	library
ca. =	circa (about)	m. =	marbled
cf. =	calf	mor. =	morocco
cold. =	coloured	N. Y. =	New York
cont. =	contemporary	ob. =	oblong
dup. =	duplicate	orig. =	original
e. =	edges	P.P. =	Privately Printed
ed. =	edited	plts. =	plates
Edinb. =	Edinburgh	ports. =	portraits
edn. =	edition	Pres. copy =	Presentation copy
engs. =	engravings	s. =	sprinkled
ex. =	extra	s. d. =	sans date
fo. =	folio	ser. =	series
front. =	frontispiece	t. e. g. =	top edges gilt
g. =	gilt	trans. =	translated
g. l. =	Gothic Letter	vol. =	volume
g. t. =	gilt top (same as top edges gilt)	v. y. =	various years
hf. =	half	vell. =	vellum
		w. a. f. =	with all faults

When, for example, a binding is stated to be mor. ex., t. e. g.—the term t. e. g. i. e. top edges gilt—implies that the other edges are uncut. When the other edges are cut the fact is stated. In some exceptional cases—such, for instance, as a first edition of 'Waverley' or an 'Endymion'—when the condition of "original boards, uncut" exists, and accounts for an abnormal price, the description is given without abbreviation. In some instances autographs are stated in the sale-catalogues to be on the titles or elsewhere in the books. When such autographs are not mentioned in B. A. R. it is only because they are of no known persons, and have no bearing whatever on the prices realized. Titles are abbreviated in the case of books in Lowndes and Brunet, and when known to be not in those works the titles are given as fully as may be necessary. The names of the auctioneers, with the date of sale and number of the lot, are given within brackets, immediately before the price, thus:—(S. Dec. 16; 516). This would represent Sotheby's, December 16, 1921; lot 516, while any month from January to August refers to the year 1922. The auctioneers represented are:

B.—Bennett, Dublin	H.—Hodgson & Co.
C.—Christie, Manson & Woods	P.—Puttick & Simpson
D.—Dowell, Edinburgh	S.—Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge
E.—Edmiston, Glasgow	St.—Stevens

For American auctioneers see the Keys to Sales. Magazines are sold "with all faults." Lots containing two or more works are not recorded except in very rare instances, when the value of one work overshadows the others and the lot is bought for it alone. Composite lots mostly afford no criterion whatever of values. Where no initials are given it is because they do not appear in the sale-catalogues and are unknown to the editor. The names of binders of importance are given in B.A.R. When not stated, although printed in the sale-catalogues, the reason is obvious. When the names of buyers are not given it is solely because, in those cases, they are not obtainable from the auctioneers. The spelling in B.A.R. is always that of the original titles, and apparent errors are not misprints. The same applies to some accents in foreign languages of which the type does not invariably permit, and also to old and erroneous punctuation.

SHAKESPEARE—Collected Works

- Comedies, Histories and Tragedies, first folio edn., wanting title with port., verses, and 3 prel. leaves (all in facs.), many corners and margins mended, some defct. with text in facs., 2 ll. of "As you like it," and one of "Timon" in fac., r 3 (of Richard III.), torn across and nearly half the leaf in fac., some ll. mended, last 6 ll. (Cymbeline) wanting (in facs.), large copy, 12 $\frac{1}{2}$  in. by 8 in., fo., mod. crimson fabric, with centre and corner-pieces of silver, bearing the monogram W. S. [not recorded in Sir S. Lee's Census], w. a. f., 1623 (S. May 22; 138) Maggs, £440
 — The same, 1st edn., port. (leaf "To the Reader"; Dedication to the Earl of Pembroke; leaf of verses by Hugh Holland; Names of the Actors, Table of Contents, and last leaf all in facs. except a small portion of the leaf "Names of the Actors," title inlaid and repaired, leaf "To the great Variety of Readers" repaired and edge remargined, leaf of verses by Ben Jonson, edge remargined; leaf of verses by L. Digges, top remargined, corner repaired, some leaves cut into, few stains and rust-holes; rough cf., fo. (12 in. by 8 in.), w. a. f., 1623 (S. June 20; 512) Sabin, £550
 — The same, first folio edn., port. (defct. and restored) with verses opposite, some MS. notes and some passages under-lined or scored through, 4 letters of title, 5 letters of imprint and date destroyed (in facs.), title-page backed, few rust-holes, some margins mended and border lines retraced, some ll. torn slightly, O 4 and qq 4 slightly defct. and restored, zz 6 (Cymbeline) cut round and inlaid, some stains, cont. cf. (rebacked mor.), with the Sheldon arms [Sir S. Lee's Census, no 20], fo. (12 $\frac{1}{2}$  in. by 8 in.), 1623 (S. May 16; 402) Rosenbach, £5,400
 * A curious feature is a mutilated cancelled leaf containing the concluding lines of "Romeo and Juliet" on recto and opening lines of "Troilus and Cressida" on reverse; this leaf, half of which has been torn away, precedes a normal leaf afterwards inserted, which supplies the Prologue of "Troilus" on recto and opening page of the play on reverse. The head ornament used is different. Only one other copy containing this cancelled leaf was known to Sir Sidney Lee (Census, no. XXXVII.), but since then at least one other copy has come to light.

- * Pasted inside the front cover is a signature "John Milton, Feb. 24, 1654," on a piece of rough paper. At the top of title of the New Testament is a signature "Elizabeth Milton, 1664" (the poet's third wife), and on one of the fly-leaves at the end is her maiden name, Elizabeth Minshull. Elsewhere in the book is the signature "William Minshull, Nantwich," and various signatures and inscriptions by members of the Matthews family, of the neighbouring town of Middlewich. This volume was sold at Wellington Street on Feb. 25, 1901, and Milton's signature was then catalogued as "undoubtedly genuine." But as since then its authenticity has been questioned by some of the experts to whom it has been submitted, it will now be sold as shown, and entirely without guarantee or right of recourse of any kind.
